

There is no reason to weaken the No-call list. If I do business with a company there would be no reason for them to contact me for further promotional programs. Should I desire a modification to my business proceedings as they stand, I should contact the business and proceed from there. Unwanted calls to my residence would only lower my opinion of the company and I would most likely take my business elsewhere.